To Be Continued ...

Booked the moving truck, purging any extra stuff, started shopping for a boat.

Who would have guessed that after living in Calgary for 40 years, out of the blue we'd get a job opportunity in Ontario on Lake Huron? It wasn't something we were looking for but we were sure thankful, especially with so few job opportunities here.

And then the call came. Opportunity cancelled. What? Why? I felt numb. In my heart I was already picturing a change of pace, a new life. Why, God? Why put us through things like this? I felt played, and angry, and disappointed.

After a few days of walking through a cloud and wrestling with God, I took a deep breath. A "knowing" passed over me. No words specifically, just the understanding that because I choose to trust and put my faith in Him I do not need to fear. I do not need to control or make plans.

I just need to take one step at a time, being thankful for doors that open and for ones that close.

This journey is to be continued.
